The School of Food, Hotel and Tourism Management was part of the College of Business until 1982, when it became part of the College of Applied Science and Technology. Formally known as the Food Administration Department, the school evolved over time and began to encompass four degree programs: Food Service Management, Hotel and Resort Management, Travel Management, General Dietetics and Nutritional Care. In 1991, the choice was made to change the name again, this time to School of Food, Hotel and Travel Management. Becoming a pioneer within the food, hotel and travel industry the school developed partnerships with American Airlines, Disney and many prominent hotel chains. Annual events such as the formal black tie fundraiser, "Puttin' on the Ritz," is hosted, organized and prepared by the students.

Currently the school is part of the College of Applied Science & Technology, and is known as the School of International Hospitality and Service Innovation.
